10 CYNTHIA STEWART,

11 Plaintiff,

12 v.

13 SNOHOMISH COUNTY PUBLIC
14 UTILITY DISTRICT NO. 1,

15 Defendant.

CASE NO. C16-0020-JCC

ORDER ON MOTION FOR ATTORNEY FEES

16 This matter comes before the Court on Plaintiff Cynthia Stewart's motion for attorney
17 fees (Dkt. No. 80). Having thoroughly considered the parties' briefing and the relevant record,
18 the Court finds oral argument unnecessary and GRANTS the motion in part for the reasons
19 explained herein.

20 I. BACKGROUND

21 Plaintiff Cynthia Stewart brought two claims against Defendant Snohomish County PUD
22 No. 1 (the PUD): violation of the Washington Law Against Discrimination (WLAD) and 23 violation of her right to protected medical leave under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA)
24 and Washington Family Leave Act (WFLA). (Dkt. No. 72 at 1.) Stewart prevailed on her WLAD
25 claim and the Court instructed her to bring any motion for reasonable attorney fees and costs,
26 pre- and post-judgment interest, and recovery of tax consequences within 30 days. (Id. at 29.)

1           Stewart did so, seeking $611,966.87 in attorney fees (the lodestar with a multiplier, plus
2 fees for preparing this motion and reply); $58,007.80 in costs; and $626,584.00 as an offset for 3 adverse tax consequences, totaling $1,296,558.67 plus interest. (See Dkt. No. 80 at 12; Dkt. No.
4 98 at 6; see also Dkt. No. 81-2 at 54; Dkt. No. 81-3 at 19; Dkt. No. 88 at 1, Dkt. No. 99 at 7, Dkt.
5 No. 99-1 at 2, Dkt. No. 101 at 3.)

6           The PUD objects to the fee request on multiple grounds. (See generally Dkt. No. 90.) The 7 PUD asks the Court to award Stewart no more than $370,042.20 in attorney fees, $45,697.98 in 8 costs, and $357,778.00 in tax consequences and interest, for a maximum total of $773,518.18.
9 (See id. at 12.)

10 II. DISCUSSION

11           Complexity and Contentiousness of Litigation: First, the PUD disputes Stewart's
12 statement that this litigation was complex and contentious. (Dkt. No. 90 at 2.) The Court agrees
13 with Stewart that this case was relatively complex, both factually and legally, particularly in light
14 of the fairly novel issue of prescribed narcotics in the workplace. Moreover, it was clear from the 15 beginning that the PUD resolutely disputed Stewart's position. The Court rejects the PUD's
16 suggestion that this case was simple and that the litigation was largely cooperative.

17           Paralegal Hourly Rate: The PUD also argues that Stewart billed an unreasonable rate for 18 paralegal time, with Troy Locati billing $175.00 per hour and Laura Faulstich raising her hourly
19 rate from $85.00 to $175.00 during the course of litigation. (Dkt. No. 90 at 5.)

20           In the past, the undersigned has approved a range of paralegal rates, including $145.00
21 (Khalid v. Citrix Sys. Inc., C16-0650-JCC, Dkt. No. 28 at 2), $160.00 (Alpha Energy v. L.D.
22 Hughes Development LLC, C08-1573-JCC, Dkt. No. 14 at 4), and $240.00 (same). The rate
23 charged in this case falls within that range, and the paralegals at issue have significant 24 experience. (See Dkt. No. 81 at 2-3.) Moreover, a superior court judge recently approved an even 25 higher hourly rate, $220.00, for Locati. (See Dkt. No. 99 at 1-2.) The Court finds this approval
26 persuasive. The PUD's objection as to the paralegal billing rates is overruled.

1           Block-billing: The PUD further asserts that the Court should reduce hours where
2 Stewart’s counsel engaged in block-billing. (Dkt. No. 90 at 5.) While the Ninth Circuit has
3 endorsed a district court’s reduction of block billing, see, e.g., Welch v. Metro Life Ins. Co., 480
4 F.3d 942, 948 (9th Cir. 2007), this Court finds that Stewart’s counsel’s entries “cover relatively
5 limited amounts of time and give sufficient information for the Court to assess the nature of the 6 work done.” See McEuen v. Riverview Bancorp, Inc., 2014 WL 2197851 at *6 (W.D. Wash. May
7 27, 2014); (see also Dkt. No. 91-1 at 2; Dkt. No. 81-2 at 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 14, 15, 16,
8 17, 18, 30, 31, 33, 38, 41, 42, 48). “[L]awyers are not required to record in great detail how each
9 minute of their time is spent on a case; rather, they must only provide enough evidence to show
10 that the effort expended during those hours was reasonable.” McEuen, 2014 WL 2197851 at *6.
11 Stewart’s attorneys have done so. The Court will not reduce the number of hours for block-
12 billing.

13           Optional Pre-Litigation Claims: In addition, the PUD argues that Stewart should not be 14 able to recover fees for activities before she filed her tort claim and civil complaint. (Dkt. No. 90 15 at 6.) But, as Stewart points out, this work—which included seeking unemployment benefits and 16 filing a complaint with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission—provided important
17 information that helped her prevail at trial. (See Dkt. No. 98 at 2-3; Dkt. No. 99 at 7-8.) This 18 objection is overruled.

19           Clerical Activities: The PUD also maintains that Stewart improperly billed for clerical
20 tasks performed by attorneys. (Dkt. No. 90 at 7; Dkt. No. 91-3 at 2-3.) In reply, however,
21 Stewart’s attorneys explain that this is a misperception and describe how the supposedly clerical
22 entries actually constitute billable time. (Dkt. No. 99 at 8-10; Dkt. No. 100 at 1-2; Dkt. No. 101
23 at 2.) This objection is overruled.

24           Limited Success: The PUD further alleges that Stewart’s recovery should be reduced
25 based on her limited success at trial. (Dkt. No. 90 at 8.) The Court disagrees. It is clear from 26 Stewart’s position and the evidence presented that her disability discrimination claim is the

1 driving force of this litigation. It is irrelevant that Stewart was partially unsuccessful at certain
2 points along the way. See Cabrales v. Cty. of Los Angeles, 935 F.2d 1050, 1053 (9th Cir. 1991)
3 (“[A] plaintiff who is unsuccessful at a stage of litigation that was a necessary step to her
4 ultimate victory is entitled to attorney’s fees even for the unsuccessful stage.”).

5 Attorney Communications: The PUD also contends that Stewart’s fee request includes
6 excessive conferences and communications between experienced attorneys. (Dkt. No. 90 at 8-9.)
7 Again, the Court disagrees. “[T]hese activities are essential to the role of a lawyer, and to deny
8 fees for communication disincentivizes sound lawyering.” (Waste Action Project v. Astro Auto
9 Wrecking, LLC, C15-0796-JCC, Dkt. No. 97 at 2.) While the Ninth Circuit has upheld the denial 10 of fees for intra-office conferences in straightforward matters, or where one attorney declared he 11 could do the work unassisted, see, e.g., Welch, 480 F.3d at 949, this case was fairly complicated.
12 The Court will not penalize Stewart’s counsel for collaboration.

13 Motion for Attorney Fees: The PUD maintains that similar patterns are evident in the 14 motion for attorney fees and costs, asking the Court to reduce Stewart’s fees for the present
15 motion by $1,681.25. (Dkt. No. 90 at 10.) Given that the Court overrules the PUD’s objections
16 thus far, the Court also declines to make this reduction.

17 Lodestar Multiplier: The PUD challenges Stewart’s application of a multiplier to the 18 lodestar in this case, arguing that it is not warranted because the only basis for Stewart’s request
19 is the contingent nature of the case, which is not a valid consideration in the Ninth Circuit. (Dkt.
20 No. 90 at 10-11.) As support, the PUD cites Davis v. City and County of San Francisco, 976 F.2d 21 1536, 1549 (9th Cir. 1992), which states: “[T]he Supreme Court declared that the typical federal 22 fee-shifting statutes, including 42 U.S.C. § 2000e–5(k), do not allow for upward adjustments to a
23 lodestar fee on the basis that prevailing party’s counsel incurred the risk of nonpayment.” That 24 case involved a Title VII claim, where 42 U.S.C. § 2000e–5(k) applied. Id. at 1540-41. However,
25 this is a WLAD case. Such a fee-shifting statute does not apply.

26 Rather, in this case, the Court has “broad discretion in awarding a contingency multiplier.” See Hotchkiss v. CSK Auto, Inc., 949 F. Supp. 2d 1040, 1046 (E.D. Wash. 2013) (addressing a WLAD claim). In fact, “the WLAD places a premium on encouraging private enforcement [and] the possibility of a multiplier works to encourage civil rights attorneys to accept difficult cases.” Pham v. Seattle City Light, 151 P.3d 976, 983 (Wash. 2007). Still, “a court should only award a contingency multiplier when ‘the lodestar figure does not adequately account for the high risk nature of the case.’” Hotchkiss, 949 F. Supp. 2d at 1046 (quoting Pham, 151 P.3d at 983).

The Court finds that, as in Hotchkiss, “this was not a particularly high-risk case.” See 949 F. Supp. 2d at 1046. The Court recognizes that Stewart’s “prospect of recovery was by no means certain.” See id. However, given the evidence regarding Stewart’s medical needs and the PUD managers’ suspicious treatment of Stewart, as well as the lack of any real evidence that Stewart was a drug-seeker or had contravened her doctor’s prescribed treatment, “an objective observer . . . might have reasonably concluded that [Stewart’s] prospects of recovery were above average in comparison to those of other employment discrimination plaintiffs.” See id.

Moreover, as in Hotchkiss, counsel’s hourly billing rates reflected the “risk inherent in accepting a complex employment discrimination case.” See id. The partners on the case billed $450.00 and $425.00 an hour. (See Dkt. No. 80 at 4.) The parties agree that this is a typical rate for employment lawyers in this market. (See Dkt. No. 81 at 2-3; Dkt. No. 90 at 4.) This rate is also significantly higher than that charged by defense counsel. (See Dkt. No. 90 at 4.) While this is unsurprising, given the burden of proof placed on Stewart, it leads the Court to find that the lodestar figure, without a multiplier, accounts for the nature of this case. The Court denies Stewart’s request for a contingency multiplier.

Reduction of Costs: The PUD further argues that Stewart seeks an unreasonable amount of costs. (Dkt. No. 90 at 11.) The PUD maintains that many of the costs are not recoverable because they “should be incorporated into a firm’s overhead and hourly rates.” (Id. at 12) (citing Nordstrom, Inc. v. Tampourlos, 733 P.2d 208, 212 (Wash. 1987)). However, Tampourlos is a

1 Consumer Protection Act case. See 733 P.2d at 210. In WLAD cases, by contrast, Washington
2 courts allow “liberal recovery of costs by the prevailing party in civil rights litigation, in order to 3 further the policies underlying these civil rights statutes.” Blair v. Wash. St. Univ., 740 P.2d
4 1379, 1387 (Wash. 1987). Stewart has shown that the challenged costs are reasonable. (See Dkt.
5 No. 99 at 12.) The Court overrules this objection.

6 Calculation of Tax Consequences: Finally, the PUD asserts that Stewart improperly
7 calculated Stewart’s adverse tax consequences. (Dkt. No. 90 at 12.) A plaintiff who prevails on a
8 WLAD claim is entitled to an offset for federal income tax consequences as an equitable remedy.
9 Blaney v. Int’l Ass’n of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, Dist. No. 160, 87 P.3d 757, 762-63
10 (Wash. 2004). This furthers the WLAD’s goal of “mak[ing] persons whole for injuries suffered 11 on account of unlawful employment discrimination.” Id. at 763 (internal quotations omitted).

12 Stewart seeks $626,584.00 in adverse tax consequences based on forensic economist Dr.
13 Paul Torelli’s calculations. (See Dkt. No. 86 at 2, 7-11.) The PUD presents a competing
14 declaration from economist and certified public accountant William Partin, who criticizes Dr.
15 Torelli’s methodology and calculates the adverse tax consequences at $357,778.00. (Dkt. Nos.
16 93, 93-1.) In reply, Stewart submits a second declaration from Dr. Torelli, who addresses these 17 criticisms and explains why they are not well-founded. (Dkt. No. 103-1 at 2-5.)

18 Having reviewed the three reports, the Court credits Dr. Torelli’s calculation, particularly 19 in light of his explanation as to the reconciliation between his method and an economics paper by 20 Barry Ben-Zion, the primary authority cited by Partin. (See Dkt. No. 103-1 at 4-5; Dkt. No. 93-1 21 at 4.) The PUD’s challenge to the amount of Stewart’s tax consequences award is overruled.

22 III. CONCLUSION

23 In sum, the Court finds the lodestar—as presented by Stewart, but without a contingency
24 multiplier—is reasonable. The Court otherwise OVERRULES the PUD’s objections to Stewart’s
25 fee request. Accordingly, the Court GRANTS IN PART Stewart’s motion for fees (Dkt. No. 80).
26 The motion is GRANTED except with respect to Stewart’s request for a lodestar multiplier.

1 The Court AWARDS Stewart:

2 (1) Attorney fees in the amount of $496,884.00 ($459,859.00 in litigation fees, without a
3 multiplier; $22,935.00 in fees for preparing the motion for fees; and $14,090.00 in 4 fees for preparing the reply brief),

5 (2) Costs in the amount of $61,647.80 ($54,642.80 in litigation costs, $5,640.00 in costs
6 for preparing the motion for fees; and $1,365.00 in costs for preparing the reply 7 brief), and

8 (3) An offset for the adverse tax consequences of the damage award in the amount of 9 $626,584.00,

10 For a total of $1,185,115.80, plus interest.
